How do you see the courtry's progress in biger conservation in the past 50 years? Can you she doesn't jit on the current wild-ties scenario in inda?

I think it is a miracle that in this day and age we still have forests where tiger populations are doing so well. Muchof this has to do with the tiger's resultive and the forest and the constanting tigers well are the constanting tigers are fine forest and the c so well. Much of this has to do with the tiger's resul-ience, and the innestanding tolerance of peocle with like on the fringes of the tiger's habitat, but it is also an extraordinary conservation success story for which india should be very groud. There are huge challenges ahead, and in perricular the growing and festering conflict between whillife and people. Toler-ance is diminishing and the demand for teal wood quarticularly since gas substidies were scoped, il-legal send mining for construction work, and fliegel better femes for commercial may all lesses the legal sand mining for construction work, and tillegal electric fences for crop protection are all lessus that have to be addressed, along with the growing number of feral dops killing prey species, and forest fires. Even sound pollution is becoming a problem, with D equipment boing constantly used in villages and resorts around pelme widdlife habitat.

Do you honestly feel poaching activities in tiger reserves have reduced? Is India still a major contribute a fill and then expected, with a fine process.

However, local porching is still widespread on the fringes of most tiger reserves, largely for bush meet but also opportunistically for big cats. As long as there international markets, there will always be some illegal trade in tiger parts. And of course, the more fleers you three for more deaths there will be. How do you see the country's progress in tiger conservation in the past 50 years? Can you shed some light on the current wildless seems in Inda?

I think it is a miracle that in this day and age we still have foreses where tiger pephaltiens are doing sowell. Chandrasekharalso said that the government is multing guidolines on what should be permissions for preloaded apps.

One of the problems being examined at this point is also how these numbers are accessed by econmors. "How are they able to identify which numbers are on WhatsApp... are they doing Itolindu, is it somedatabase they have goff. If there is a dotabase, it is a vielation of privacy or if not, are they are doing it through a bot... sending messages to random numbers... But that is certainly something platforms will be asked to look at," he said on the sidelines of an event organised by the Public Affairs borum of In-Chandrasekhar tweeted on Wednesday that the government will investigate a claim that WhatsApp accesses microphones of smartphone users while the phones are not in use. In a tweet, the minister had said the government will examine the alleged breach of privacy even as the new Digital Personal Data Protection Bill was being readied.

On its part, WhatsApp promised to reduce by half the unsolicited and unrecognised calls from the line reas-theursolicited and unrecog-nised calls from the interna-tional numbers to its sub-scribers. The company said it is using technology such as AI and machine learning to counter the menace.
